

VISION FOR THE FUTURE

For all who had grown-up in the 80s and 90s around skating, some can say that they are a rare breed of skaters. During that time; skating had to go through an extensive growing phase, it wasn't really widely understood or accepted (just like anything). To add, skate parks was a thing of the future like now, and the only skate parks you have, be something you would have to build in your own or a friend's backyard. But when you do, every "skaters" in town will know you right away!

Fast forward 30 years later to today, where skateboarding now is becoming an over-night phenomenon. Skate parks are mainly everywhere now in most developed countries and cities worldwide. Skaters of all ages are just shredding the scenes starting as young as 5 years old. Putting skateboarding into perspective economically; thanks to the sport, it had made Nike even more money today due to their NikeSB brand which started in 2002, but really explode after signing on skateboard pro Paul Rodriguez. There are more ongoing international skate competition event going on today and more mainstream media coverage of the sport than ever before on local television networks. In an essence, all eyes are on skateboarding today.

Hence segway into the vision for the future of skateboarding from us; we see a bright and colorful path the next 30+ years maybe due to the introduction of skateboarding into the upcoming 2020 Summer Olympics and beyond. Maybe with this, local and country government will see the need to assist and help further develop and/or renovate more local skate parks for the future generations to represent its country. And for this, we are truly excited for what's to come as we'll all play a very important role in growing our skateboard communities locally and internationally.

INITIATIVE PROGRAM

“Leave No Child Behind, Without a Skateboard”

The sport is known worldwide, but when it come to accessibility for an individual to own a professional high-quality skateboard equipment set-up; it can be a tough endeavor for more than 55% country in the world today even if they can afford it or not, due to lack of distribution channels. Accessibility to a proper skateboard equipment is key and the initiative can provide many children in under or un-developed skateboard countries an equal opportunity chance to participate in the sport activity.

Skateboarding has its certain magic when it comes to grabbing the attention of young children and even adults. The initiative is to empower and provide an opportunity for any passionate skateboarders to really excel and help fulfill their dreams.
